ACR² Outstanding Teacher Award

Carl R. Fuhrman, MD

Introduction by Jesse D. Woodard, MD

A tenured professor and chief of thoracic imaging at the University of Pittsburgh, Carl R. Fuhrman, MD, has devoted his career to education and is a tireless advocate for residents and medical students. A perennial recipient of teaching and mentorship awards at the medical school and resident levels, he has been honored with the President’s Distinguished Teaching Award, the highest tribute given to an educator at the University of Pittsburgh. His contributions extend to other departments. He has been recognized as an outstanding teacher by the Departments of Internal Medicine and Emergency Medicine and the Division of Pulmonary Medicine. Dr Fuhrman has authored more than 70 articles and countless book chapters and has presented innumerable lectures and exhibits. He currently serves as Vice President of AMSER. The American Alliance of Academic Chief Residents in Radiology (ACR²) is pleased to bestow on Carl R. Fuhrman, MD, the third annual ACR² Outstanding Teacher Award.

Jannette Collins, MD, MEd, FCCP, FACR

Introduction by Eric J. Stern, MD

The “quintessential radiology educator”: This phrase succinctly sums up the academic career of Jannette Collins, MD, MEd, FCCP, FACR.

In bringing her formal advanced education training to radiology over the past 2 decades, Dr Collins has been a driving force and a nationally recognized leader in radiology education. Through her many roles, she has brought curriculum development to the forefront of our educational programs and has helped develop innovative evaluation methods as a visionary leader in the field of self-assessment. Dr Collins has spoken countless times on all aspects of radiology education and has mentored many of us along the way. In many ways, her efforts have helped establish the radiology clinician-educator as a recognized and highly valued scholarly career path at numerous institutions.

Dr Collins is the Ben Felson Professor and chair of the Department of Radiology at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine. She has published extensively on chest imaging. Her book Essentials of Chest Radiology, in its 2nd edition, has been read by countless trainees and practicing radiologists worldwide. In addition, Dr Collins is the long-serving Editor-in-Chief of Seminars in Roentgenology.

Dr Collins is a highly recognized AUR member, having served as the president of the AUR, APDR, and ACER (as one of the founding officers). She is the recipient of numerous awards, including the 2004 APDR Achievement Award, the 2005 RSNA Outstanding Educator Award, and now the 2013 ACER Achievement Award.

Janni is the consummate radiology educator. There is no one more deserving of this award. On behalf of the leadership and members of ACER and the AUR, congratulations on your outstanding achievements!